The peaks on both sides of the Li River are tall and straight, with various shapes. There are many bushes and small flowers growing on the stone peaks. From a distance, they look like the clothes on a beautiful woman. On the embankment of the river bank, the year-round green bamboos look like a girl's skirt, swaying in the wind and graceful. The river flows along the mountains, and the scenery is breathtaking. You can see the reflections of strange peaks, clear water and green mountains, shepherd boys singing, fishermen fishing, and simple... Walking in the paradise, looking at the mountains and rivers in front of you, breathing the fresh air here, and hearing the excitement in front of you, "This is a forgotten hometown, this is a paradise for relaxing body and mind and living a happy life."

Yulong River Bamboo-Rafting

The Yulong River is the longest tributary of the Li River in Yangshuo. The water is as clear as a mirror, making it easy to take photos that look like landscape paintings. Compared with the scenery of the Li River, the scenery of the Yulong River is more gentle and is known as the "Little Li River". Bamboo rafting on the Yulong River is very famous.
