It is also the headquarters of the United States Pacific Fleet. The surprise attack by the Japanese Navy on December 7, 1941, led the United States to declare war on Japan. Thus, making the attack on Pearl Harbor the immediate cause of the United States' entry into World War II.

Hawaii State Capital

Diamond Head Lookout

Diamond Head Lookout is a wildly popular destination for tourists and hikers. Located on Oahu beach, this area offers panoramic views of the southern shore of Oahu and Waikiki. Since the lookout offers such clear views of the surrounding area, it was used as a military post from the turn of the century onward. Notable sites along the way include World War II-era bunkers and underground tunnels.

Hālonā Blowhole

On windy days when the tide is high, the ocean breeze sends the waves rolling onto the shore where the rock formation then shoots sea spray high into the air through the cave acting like a geyser. Today you will look at the Hālonā blowhole. This blowhole is most active when the tide is high, and the winds are strong. It can even shoot sea sprays up to thirty feet high in the air.

Nuuanu Pali Lookout

Just a five-mile drive northeast of Downtown Honolulu is the Nuuanu Pali Lookout. It offers panoramic views of the sheer Koolau cliffs and lush Windward Coast. The Pali Lookout is also known for its strong and howling winds. You'll understand why the Nuuanu Pali Lookout is one of Oahu's best scenic points when you feel the wind pushing up against you. You can even hear the winds whistle through the mountains and see the breathtaking views of Oahu's lush Windward Coast.

Polynesian Cultural Center

The Polynesian Cultural Center is Hawaii's #1 visitor attraction. It has six island villages representing the unique island cultures of Hawaii, including Fiji, Aotearoa (New Zealand), Samoa, Tahiti, and Tonga. All day

Kepaniwai Park and Heritage Gardens

Kepaniwai Park and Heritage Gardens, adjacent to the Wailuku Stream, is a beautiful public park containing displays that honor the cultures that contributed to modern Maui. Among the interesting structures are an early-Hawaiian hale, a New England-style saltbox, a Portuguese-style villa with gardens, and dwellings from such other cultures as China and the Philippines. The park's name harkens back to the infamous Battle of Kepaniwai in 1790 between Kamehameha I and Kahekili, king of Maui.

Maui Tropical Plantation

Maui Tropical Plantation is located in Waikapu, on the road heading from Kihei towards Lahaina. The property covers over 60 acres and is home to a wide variety of tropical plants, including crops being cultivated at the plantation including coffee, macadamia nuts, avocado, and papaya.

Makena Beach

Makena Beach is located south of Wailea and provides a secluded alternative to more crowded beaches in Kaanapali and Lahaina. With its dramatic cliff landscape and brilliant blue/green water, Makena Beach is one of the most popular shorelines in Maui. It's often referred to as Maui's "Big Beach" and is one of the largest beaches on the island, with golden sands extending nearly 1.5 miles long and 100 yards wide. You can swim or snorkel in the water, enjoy a picnic in the shade, or simply sunbathe on the seemingly endless expanse of sand. Whatever you choose, a trip to Makena Beach will be one you'll never forget!

Ho'okipa Beach Park

Hookipa — it means "hospitality" in Hawaiian. Located miles away from the crowds, this pristine beach is nestled on the island's north shore alongside the Road To Hana. Thanks to its consistent winds, large waves, and sprawling reef system, this is one of the best locations in all of Hawaii for windsurfing. Modern-day surfing on Maui started here, at this beach just outside of the charming artsy town of Paia on Maui's northern coastline.
